הדלקת נרות: 6:57

FROM the MENAHEL

Dear Parents,

In today's shiur chumash, we read ושמח את אשתו, the Torah commands every person that after getting married he should bring joy to his wife. The mitzva to bring joy to others appears several times in the Torah, on various occasions, and to different people.

The Torah's instruction to bring others' joy serves an important lesson to parents and mechanchim. We should instill in our children from a very young age the responsibility and the method of how to bring joy to others.

When should lead by example and show our children our dedication to bringing joy to others. We don't put ourselves first. This will serve as a living example for them.

Once they are committed to the value of bringing joy to others we can show them how it is done. A young child can share a toy, give someone a chance to play a game, or invite someone over for their friend's sake rather than their own. As our children get older, there will be more opportunities that require reflection on how to help others be happy.

Children ages ten and up should be encouraged to write down three ways that they can help a parent, older or younger sibling to be happy.

Thank you to the class mothers for enhancing your children's classrooms with games and activities. With two rain days this week the games came to use right away.

Thank you to all the parents who joined us for the Back to School Night. Your efforts should be repaid manifold with chassidische nachas from your children.

Thank you for your patience with the transportation as the busses begin their roots and all routes are set into a routine.

Wishing you a good Shabbos,
Rabbi Kaplan
